NRHA policy work
The Rural Health Standing Committee of the Australian Health Ministers’ Advisory Council (AHMAC) met in Hobart on 24-25 June 2009 and the Alliance attended that part of the meeting focusing on development of a new national strategic framework or plan for rural and remote health. Preparation of such a plan will be important work over the next 12 months, complementary to strategic reform in other areas of the health sector (including the National Health and Hospital Reform Commission's (NHHRC) proposals for 'ending the blame game', investing in maternity services, a new national preventative health care strategy and a national primary care strategy).

The Alliance has welcomed the Senate's report on men's health, which includes strong support for a longitudinal study, and is pleased at the prospect of the Commonwealth Government developing a national policy on men's health.

The Alliance is preparing for the debates now expected on strategic reforms in health by unpacking some of the details on regional governance and engagement, and the relationships between sustainable communities and good health. In this latter respect there is a keen eye on the 'Territory Towns' proposal which would apparently see the Federal and NT Governments collaborate to confine future investments in infrastructure (and services and workforce?) to selected nodes, to the potential detriment of smaller places and outstations.

Recommendations and contacts from the 10th Conference have re-energised the Alliance's work on climate change and health, and on the links between arts, health and community development.

There is mounting frustration in the general community that there is no apparent progress on patients' travel and accommodation, and ongoing concern about oral and mental health in The Bush.

The likely impacts on rural oral and mental health, and on the health of Indigenous people, should be key factors in determining Governments' approach to health reform.

Australian Journal of Rural Health
Issue 17(3) of the Australian Journal of Rural Health was published online on 21 May 2009 and is now available to subscribers in hard copy.
Key topics include missed opportunities for rural health research; a case study of a successful postgraduate program designed to meet the needs of remote health practitioners; the impacts of rural clinical placements on health students; body fatness and small screen activity among regional Victorian children; stress and help-seeking for drought stricken citrus growers in the Riverland SA; and accommodation support for adults with intellectual disability.
SENATE INQUIRY INTO REGIONAL AND REMOTE INDIGENOUS COMMUNITIES

The Senate Select Committee on Regional and Remote Indigenous Communities has tabled its second report. The report makes 11 recommendations, two of which relate to the BasicsCard, introduced as part of the NTER income management measures. The committee found that some roadhouses that had refused to sell non-sniffable Opal fuel in the Petrol Sniffing Strategy Zone in Central Australia had been licensed as BasicsCard merchants to sell fuel. The committee recommended that these roadhouses be prevented from being licensed unless they agreed to sell Opal fuel. The committee also found that some communities did not have access to a licensed store and were therefore unfairly required to travel long distances at great expense to access their income managed funds. The committee recommended that alternative arrangements be made so that people in these communities can access their income managed funds more easily.

COUNCIL OF AUSTRALIAN GOVERNMENTS' MEETING, 2 JULY 2009

Australia faces ongoing economic and social challenges which Australian Governments are determined to address. COAG had a broad ranging discussion on further measures to overcome Indigenous disadvantage.

The Chair of the Productivity Commission, Mr Gary Banks AO, gave a presentation to COAG on the findings of the report Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage: Key Indicators 2009. The report shows that while there has been some progress against the Closing the Gap targets, such as infant mortality, employment and home ownership, overall the gap between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians remains unacceptable.

Given this context, COAG agreed that effective implementation of the existing National Agreements and National Partnership Agreements was vital to close the gap in Indigenous outcomes. As part of COAG's increasing focus on implementation issues, particular effort will be needed on Indigenous outcomes. In addition, COAG asked the Working Group on Indigenous Reform to prepare a national strategy to improve food security for Indigenous people living in remote Australia before the end of 2009, adopted a National Integrated Strategy for Closing the Gap, agreed to a Closing the Gap: National Indigenous Education Statement, and signed a Closing the Gap: National Partnership Agreement on Remote Indigenous Public Internet Access. COAG also agreed to a Closing the Gap: National Urban and Regional Service Delivery Strategy to address Indigenous disadvantage in urban and regional locations.

Bridges and barriers: addressing Indigenous incarceration and health - Report by the National Indigenous Drug and Alcohol Committee

Despite the investment by governments to reduce incarceration, Indigenous Australians have continued to fill our correction systems at alarmingly disproportionate rates, making up almost one quarter of Australian's prison population and over half of Indigenous juveniles in corrective institutions. This paper calls for action to address this 'disturbing problem' revealing Indigenous adults are 13 times more likely to be in prison than other Australians. The paper recommends individual education support funds be launched for every Indigenous young person and the eligibility of current diversion programs be changed to enable Indigenous people greater access to alcohol and drug treatment instead of prison.

SCRIPT RIGHTS NOT A PRIORITY: EXPERT

A proposal for pharmacists operating in remote Aboriginal communities to be given rights to prescribe medications has been dismissed by a prominent expert on indigenous pharmacy. Rollo Manning, a pharmacy consultant in the Northern Territory, said increasing dispensing fees for pharmacists working with indigenous communities and freeing up pharmacy ownership restrictions should be given higher priority than prescribing rights - an idea which was recently recommended by the Australian Pharmacy Council (APC). Mr Manning said prescribing involved diagnosis, which was something that pharmacists did not receive much training in.

AIHW REPORT

Scale of homelessness varies widely
Rates of homelessness vary widely across Australia, not only between states and territories but within them, according to national research commissioned by all jurisdictions and published by the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare (AIHW). The reports showed higher rates of homelessness in inner city areas, and that, outside cities, homelessness rates in northern Australia are very high. In the Kimberley region, for example, there were 1,870 homeless people but a rate of 638 people per 10,000. These rates partly reflect issues of Indigenous transience and inadequate housing, although non-Indigenous Australians also experience higher rates of homelessness in remote areas.

TO RECRUIT AND RETAIN: OVERSEAS TRAINED DOCTORS WORKING IN RURAL INDIGENOUS AREAS

Between mid-1990s to 2004, there has been an eighty per cent increase in overseas trained doctors working in rural areas, compared with an eight percent increase for Australian trained doctors. Despite this increase, overseas trained doctors often find themselves in a different culture, with different healthcare models and often feel ill prepared, unsupported and have no control over how the service operates. Other challenges noted include: a change in biomedical and familiar disease treatment schedules; bureaucratic and communication challenges; and transitioning from paper-based to computer-based systems. A higher recruitment and retention rate for overseas trained doctors in Indigenous communities can be achieved through increased cultural and communication training, fostering equality within the rural healthcare, avoiding top-down organisational models and approaching issues in an open and flexible manner.
